NUMBER 4 — ADDISON AND WOODHULL, STEUBEN COUNTY, N. Y., THURSDAY JANUARY 28, 1937 — VOLUME VIII

Mrs. Charles Miller Dies— Family Woodhull Pioneers

Mother of Advertiser and Sentinel Editor and Publisher—Ill But Few Months—Lived in Addison 20 Years—Ardent Grange and Pomona Member and Presbyterian Church Worker — Paternal Grandfather Pioneer in Woodhull

Mrs. Charles A. Miller, aged 80, died at her home on Goodhue street Monday morning, January 25, 1937. She had been well until early last fall when her health began to fail, and about the middle of November she submitted to a major operation. She rallied bravely for several weeks but eventually every aid of medical science could not save her life.

Ida Falkner Miller was born at Academy Corners, Pa., February 16, 1856, the oldest daughter of Mary Smith and Renssaler Falkner. Her paternal grandfather was Benjamin Smith, one of the pioneer settlers of Woodhull who, with his sons operated sawmills along the south branch of Tuscarora Creek, manufacturing much of the fine pine lumber which was then rafted down the rivers to Chesapeake Bay. Benjamin Smith donated the land south of the village for the use of the Woodhull cemetery. Through her mother's family Mrs. Miller was also descended from the Howlands who came to America with the Mayflower and directly afterwards.

At the age of two years she went with her parents to Woodstock, Ill., at which place she later attended the grade school and academy. When she was seven her father volunteered for the Union service, joining a picked cavalry company. Throughout her life Mrs. Miller vividly remembered the suffering and privation endured by wives and children of those who went to war.

At Woodstock on the 15th of April, 1878 she married Charles A. Miller of Chicago and went to that city where they made their home until March, 1895 when they moved to Rathbone. In 1917 Mr. and Mrs. Miller moved to the home they purchased in Addison where the remainder of her life was spent.

Mrs. Miller lived the truly Christian life in which she believed. She was a member and constant attendant of the Addison Presbyterian Church. She was also a member of the Ladies Missionary Society and the Fidelis Class of the Presbyterian Church. She was a member of Addison Grange and Steuben County Pomona Grange and had been a delegate of Steuben Pomona to New York State Grange. Aside from unremitting attention to Christian work and attendance at the Grange Mrs. Miller's interests in life were focused on her family, her home and love of nature which she released in caring for flowers.

Besides her husband Mrs. Miller leaves four children: C. Arthur Miller of 2002 Davis Street, Elmira; Mrs. Maude M. Perry, Mrs. Marie M. Hannahs and Maurice E. Miller, all of Addison; one sister, Mrs. Carrie A. Crittenden who has made her home with Mrs. Miller for a number of years; also nine grandchildren: C. Arthur Miller of Elmira, Charles P. Miller of Boston, Mrs. Howard Strait, Mrs. Sheldon Stewart, Wilbor Hannahs and Mrs. Leonard Hoaglin of Addison, Mrs. J. Willard Gossner of Woodhull and Miss Louise S. Miller of Framingham, Mass. She leaves six great-grandchildren: Marjorie Ann and Maryland Miller of Boston, James Frederick and Patricia Maxine Miller of Elmira, Marcia and Lois Strait of Addison.

The funeral will be held from the home on Goodhue Street this afternoon (Thursday) at two o'clock, the Rev. John V. Axtell, pastor of the Addison Presbyterian Church officiating. Burial will be in Addison Rural Cemetery.

Donations of Furniture Asked For CCC Camp

Officers of the CCC Camp have asked us to petition our readers for some furniture. There is a large recreation hall at the camp which it is desired to make as homelike as possible for the enrollees. Furniture in all other buildings is constructed by themselves and is substantial and serviceable.

However, in the recreation hall, small tables, chairs, book cases and any household furniture is desired. Anyone having pieces they are not using and would like to donate them, a telephone call to the camp will bring a truck for them.

Furniture that is in slight need of repair will also be taken as the camp carpenters can make them serviceable.

Following are Community Objectives for which the Advertiser will contend during 1937:

1. Naming the Gillet Library.
2. Acknowledgment of the gift to Addison High School, commemorating the name of George I. True.
3. Securing a new industry for Addison.

AHS Students Not Concerned in Campbell School Thefts

The Addison High School team was not the opponent of the Campbell High team when the hats and basketball disappeared. There seems to be a misunderstanding by virtue of last week's story in this paper. The Addison High School was not involved in the story in any way. Just local rowdies were responsible for the thefts.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

Flood damage estimates range near the $300,000,000 mark and over 75 lives have been sacrificed to the demon flood waters of the Ohio river valley. This flood is the worst flood disaster in the history of the American Red Cross. Water in the Ohio river rose 75 feet during the unprecedented January floods.

Throughout his entire tenure in this community he has been doing business in Main Street, first in the building now occupied by the Red Front store and shortly after he moved to his present location.

Mr. Davis has been interested and active in community affairs since coming here. He has sold his entire stock to the Brothers Company of Rochester, who bought the LaGrange stock and conducted a sale here several years ago.

Red Cross Appeal

Have you been listening to your radios lately? If so, then you know and realize the horrors of the flood that is inundating the Ohio Valley. Words cannot describe what is taking place there, it is the largest and most destructive flood that this country has known. Approximately two hundred thousand families throughout the stricken area are without food, shelter, clothing, drinking water and other necessities of life, depending upon the American Red Cross and other organizations for help.

Cincinnati is in dire need, besides being flooded this city has also been ravaged by fire which swept four blocks, approximately nineteen business places.

Contagious diseases such as pneumonia, flu and typhoid fever are beginning to create havoc throughout the stricken area and the need for serum and vaccine is great.

The flood has not yet subsided and many are marooned on housetops and other inadequate locations. There are no lights and work is being carried on by lantern and candle light.

Public health authorities state there will be a menace when the water subsides owing to the impure water of the reservoirs and the debris of the flood and refuse of clogged sewers.

The Addison Red Cross is asking the residents of this village to heed this far flung appeal for help. Contributions may be left in the M. G. Hubbs electric store, in the lobby of the First National Bank or with the Rev. Thomas A. Withey, chairman of the local chapter. All contributions will be sent to the National Headquarters of the Red Cross.

Frank H. Smith Gives Talk on Text-books and Centralization

Superintendent Frank H. Smith of Addison led a very interesting discussion on "Free Text Books" and "Centralization" at the regular January meeting of Woodhull P. T. A. Tuesday evening in the school auditorium.

Mr. Smith gave an estimated budget on a centralized school and requirements that would be necessary to centralize Woodhull High School. He plainly pointed out facts regarding the necessity of such action when other school in nearby vicinities were offering greater advantages than we can supply under present conditions.

Many from the outlying districts, who have pupils in the school, were present and received information to assist them, providing their districts would centralize.

When the construction of the present school building was made provisions were also made for additional building to be made on the north and south sides and raising the roof for a second floor. With these advantages and aid given by the state many favor centralization.

The meeting was opened by singing "School Days" and "Long, Long Trail" led by Mrs. Miriam Andrews with Miss Jeanette White at the piano.

Reports were given by the secretary, treasurer and special committees. It was voted to give $5 to the Red Cross for relief work in the flooded districts.

An invitation is to be given the Alfred Glee Club to attend the next regular P. T. A. meeting in February. The Glee Club has been heard here on many other occasions. Their singing and other numbers have been greatly enjoyed and another pleasant visit is anticipated.

A Valentine card party will be sponsored by the P. T. A.

Two violin solos — "Indian Lament" and "Perpetuation" were rendered by J. Willard Gossner, accompanied by Miss White.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Freeman Grange Sponsors Flood Relief Dance

Historic M. E. Parsonage Modernized By Parishioners

Old Building is Completely Refinished Inside—Men and Women Donate Time and Materials to Repair Ancient Edifice — Interesting Materials Found— List of Minister Residents Given.

The parsonage repairs are nearly completed. The repairs caused a great deal of historic material to be uncovered by the workmen doing the refinishing of the building.

Uncovering this historic material brought many searches into old records for historic material to determine dates, people and places concerned with the material uncovered.

The present Methodist parsonage is reckoned well over 100 years old. However it was not always used as a parsonage. It started its career in life as a private home, then it became an academy from which the present section takes its name, and then it was purchased for a parsonage.

There is do doubt about its being a school, for in addition to the word of Hon. D. M. Darrin, who attended the school, there were found several evidences of the building having been used for teaching. In the rear of the second floor, when workers tore ancient wallpaper from the walls they found blackboards used at that time and many of them had the chalk writing of some unknown student who left a mark for posterity. Some of the characters were still legible after one-half a century of being buried. An old hand hewn pointer used by teachers to call attention to things on the board or to chastise erring children was also found. Newspapers of the last century were brought to light from behind the walls.

Mr. Darrin is the oldest Referee in bankruptcy proceedings in the United States and is also a member of the first graduating class from Cornell University. His mind is keenly alert and active and he vividly remembers many of the happenings and incidents in the old school building.

Former Aldrich Home

The building had been constructed by Captain Aldrich as a residence. The Civil War called Captain Aldrich to duty and he sold the house to a group of men of the community, each one contributing $200. There were 12 men who donated this sum for the purchase for a school. Among these men were: David Darrin, George Farnham, Ferell Dininny, Dr. Reuben Brown, John W. Mitchell, John W. Dininny.

High school as well as grammar work was given in the school there. Major McKay, a retired soldier spent considerable time instructing boys in the art of military warfare, as the Civil War was raging and everyone was war conscious. Shortly after this a wooden school of larger capacity had been erected and the present structure passed into the hands of the Methodist Church.

At the time the building was erected, it was necessary to reach the second floor by an outside stair casing. Since that original staircase, three others have been constructed within the building to meet the needs of various times and construction emergencies.

Three years ago a list of the ministers who served the church was printed. The search of the church records with the Rev. Garland Gladstone Lacey, present pastor, revealed additional names for that list and also the dates of the ministry and residence in the parsonage

THE CO-OPS

The administration has shown considerable interest during the past few months in the co-operative movement, and in fact a delegation was sent to Sweden to study the growth of co-operatives which have lately flourished in that country. Some Washington writers have noted that less enthusiasm is manifested around the capitol over co-operatives since this delegation returned, but the subject keeps cropping up and some fear has been expressed that co-operatives may eventually crowd many lines of private business out of existence.

This outcome is not indicated by the success of a co-operative store which was established in Des Moines, Ia., according to a recent article in Nation's Business. The co-operative movement has probably made greater headway among Iowa farmers than anywhere else in the country, and where it was proposed to experiment with the system in the city Des Moines seemed an ideal place to try it out. For one thing the university located there has many affiliated faculty members intensely interested in co-operatives. So a store and gasoline station was started. Members were signed up with a small amount of stock each and the institution started functioning. Surprisingly it was soon found that only about half the shareholders traded regularly at the store and the growth in membership proved slow indeed. The store was not located in a good shopping district and it seems that many members of this cooperative had rather do their trading with private firms than to go out of their way to purchase groceries and gasoline at the store in which they had money invested. Many members most interested in the project from a theoretical sta[illegible] did not [illegible]

Cooperatives ha[illegible] considerable success in certain agricultural regions. Probably one of the most successful selling coops in the east is the G. L. F. But the experiment in Des Moines does not indicate co-ops will really supplant private firms to any great extent in the retail field. There is too much desire on the part of the public to shop around, for cooperative stores to gain a big foothold in the cities and competition will probably hold the movement down in villages as well.

Some co-ops base their appeal partly on low overhead and carry the idea out by paying low wages to employees. This has a tendency to bring less efficient personnel into their stores, which in turn is apt to be reflected eventually in their business methods and progressiveness.

The co-operative movement will undoubtedly continue to grow among farmers, especially from the angle of marketing their produce. As long as the co-ops stand on their own feet, paying taxes as do private firms and competing on an equal footing with the individual, private industry should have no fears. But when the government embarks in co-ops with all its special favors, there will be grave cause for actual concern to private business. After all, a co-op in its true form is merely a group of individuals working together for their own private benefit. As such they are entitled to every help accorded the individual, but no more.

LEWIS DOMINEERS

Whatever one may think of the auto strike this winter, John L. Lewis has announced one of the most domineering attitudes ever taken by a union labor leader. When Lewis spoke of the possibility of the President taking action in the controversy he very pointedly said: "That's up to the President, but labor intervened for him."

Which was a blunt way of putting what is quite evidently in the back of the Lewis head, that labor voted strongly for Mr. Roosevelt's re-election, therefore the latter owes a debt to the unions. And according to the Lewis point of view the only way for the President to do is to discharge that debt by taking sides with labor in this controversy, irrespective of the merits of either side of the case. Which on the face of things may be regarded as one of the most brazen attempts ever made to coerce the President of the United States into deciding an issue irrespective of the merits of the case. And it appears that Mr. Roosevelt is not too pleased to have the iron-jawed labor leader call him to pay accounts in quite such a bare-faced manner.

The strike in Detroit and elsewhere around the country is a matter which directly involves some principles which have always been dear to the American people. Can a person's rights on their own property remain inviolate, or can a group step into another's building and flount the law by staying there until ready to leave? Platitudes on the subject do not alter the fact that human rights are inseparable from property rights. When we destroy property rights we destroy the right of the working man to possess his home free from molestation.

The President, if he is fair-minded, will not lose sight of the fact thousands of men have been deprived of work in the auto plants because a few tied up the industry in a strike, called evidently to force a union principle down the throats of employers.

MR. DAVIS RETIRES

Addison people are expressing sincere regret on learning that Lewis Davis has sold his stock and is retiring from the clothing business he has conducted in this village for about a quarter of a century. Mr. Davis has been a familiar figure in business circles of the village, and he will be sorely missed by the hundreds of citizens who have come to regard him as a fixture in the community.

Mr. Davis came to Addison from Penn Yan where he had previously been engaged in the mercantile business, purchasing the interest of Aaron Aronson in the Star Clothing Company then occupying the building where the Addison Red and White Grocery now is. Later he bought the building formerly the home of the Hub Clothing stare, which has housed his business ever since.

During his long sojourn on Main Street Mr. Davis built up a large business by fair dealing and honest handling of merchandise, which has won him the confidence of a great clientele of customers in the wide territory surrounding Addison. His retirement will be a distinct loss to the business life of the village and to the larger community he served. For ourselves and our subscribers the Advertiser extends to Mr. Davis felicitation at this hour of his retirement of business. It is the wish of all his friends that now he has taken time off for rest after an active life, he will find a full measure of health and happiness in the days ahead, with leisure to enjoy them.

THE "OBJECTIVE BOX"

Every person should have some objective in life upon which they may focus their attention and drive ahead. If a man has no objectives he is just drifting with the current and can only depend on luck. A community is in many ways like an individual, it must have objectives, and these objectives should definitely be aimed for the welfare of a majority of the community. There is this difference between a community and an individual; an individual is vocal, while a community can speak only through the voices of its citizens or the voice of the press.

At different times the Advertiser has [illegible] what appeared to be [illegible] objectives for [illegible] son. Some of these objectives have been accomplished, but others have apparently been neglected or forgotten by our citizens. To continue to voice community objectives and prevent their being forgotten the Advertiser is going to begin running an "Objective Box", in which will be found some of the worthwhile objectives for Addison people to accomplish. From time to time new objectives will be added, and it is to be hoped that the list may frequently have stricken from its things we have actually accomplished. So Mr. and Mrs. reader if you find yourself "paged" either as an individual or an unnamed official, the easiest way to get yourself OUT of the "Objective Box" is to work hard for community objectives. In this way we can mold a better community.

WAR INSURANCE

During the last few months there have been increasingly frequent stories filtering through news channels to indicate that some of the European countries desire to enter negotiations for some kind of a settlement of the long owed war debts. Of course these countries know without entering into a conference, just what they owe the U. S., and they should be conscious of the fact the sums are greatly reduced from the total borrowed here. But the reason which prompts them to wish to make a settlement does not spring from any desire an honest debtor has of stepping up to his creditor and paying, rather does it indicate a desire to regain a credit standing.

The countries of Europe for many months have been trembling on the brink of war. Nearly every nation in that suspicious family is actually aware of the fact we have a law which forbids further lending to any debtor country which has repudiated its debts, and like the "friend in need" they each and every one are aware of the fact they may urgently need us in the near future. So we see a stirring of conscience among the debtor nations, not because they have suddenly seen the error of their ways of swearing off indebtedness, but because they want to re-establish a badly warped credit. Most of them have declared they cannot pay the enormous debt owed here, even at the greatly reduced figures we granted them, and as long as they pursue their present national policies perhaps they cannot. Ever since the last war ended most of the European countries have been spending huge sums preparing for the next war, and these expenditures have stripped their treasuries bearer than Mother Hubbard's cupboard. It takes money to fight, and the U. S. with its immense gold stocks looks like the fountain head of money. So, why shouldn't these debtor countries try to square themselves with us?

If our federal government is smart it will refuse to make any further concessions on war

Roosevelt Expected to Win Aims By Process Court Will Approve

By MARK SULLIVAN

[illegible] the inauguration of an ancient Roman emperor, no [illegible] and soothsayers would read omens into the weather. [illegible] the cold January rain and observe the hurrying citizenry slushing along the streets; they would draw their soggy togas close to their shivering bodies, and gloomily they would predict that Mr. Roosevelt's second term would be stormy. For confirmation they would recall that Mr. Hoover's inaugural day in 1929 was one of the most inclement in recent years—and look what happened in his term! For yet further confirmation they would go back to the raging blizzard which made March 4, 1909, the worst Inauguration Day in our history; and they would point out that the President who took office that day, William H. Taft, had an unhappy term, coming to an end with the disastrous 1912 split in his party.

But I suspect that augurs, soothsayers, and all such foretellers come to their profession in part by reason of being imaginative and temperamental, and hence they are even more subject than the rest of us to having their moods affected by the weather. And I imagine the coming four years will not be different from what they would have been had the inaugural day been of a kind to make the augurs optimistic.

Mr. Roosevelt and the country have working for them the enormous force of economic recovery. It is at work here and it is at work throughout the world. Its operation within our own borders will make us more comfortable here, and this condition at home will be further fostered by economic recovery abroad. We shall be economically more comfortable, and because of that, politically more serene. It is most doubtful if a Huey Long or a Father Coughlin can arise among us during the coming few years. They were fruit of the national mood of depression just as "General" Coxey and his army were fruit of the depression of the early 1890's.

One of the controversies most expected during Mr. Roosevelt's second term, and one most wished for by those who blow the bellows of commotion, is strife about the Supreme Court. It is tenable to doubt whether this will come. Two days before the inauguration a Senator favorable to the idea of requiring seven justices to concur in a decision of unconstitutionality called at the White House. On leaving he took advantage of the world's most resonant sounding-board, the White House steps, to promote his purpose by saying that Mr. Roosevelt would call a conference of Congressional leaders to consider possible legislation as to the court.

The circumstances gave rise to newspaper surmise that the President favored the legislation his caller is identified with. Promptly the White House issued a correction. The action suggests the degree of caution Mr. Roosevelt is practicing about the court, his preference for amity. Statements by White House callers are usually permitted to pass by this Administration, though Mr. Roosevelt must often have the feeling that other Presidents have had about use of the White House doorstep as a springboard for ideas held by callers. Had Mr. Roosevelt been less careful in his attitude about the court he might have let the incident "ride" as a trial balloon to find out how the country feels.

Mr. Roosevelt will get his objectives—minimum standards of wages, prevention of child labor, prevention of other sweat-shop conditions in industry. But he will get them by a process that the Supreme Court can approve. The separate states will write laws setting standards appropriate to local conditions, and forbidding the sale of goods made under conditions that violate the states' standards. These laws, if written carefully in the light of recent decisions of the Supreme Court, will be held valid. At the same time Congress will enact laws forbidding transportation into a state of goods made under conditions which the state disapproves. The validity of such laws is practically assured by the court's recent unanimous decision in support of a law forbidding shipment of convict-made goods into a state having a statute which outlaws such goods.

The probability of some such approach as this is indicated by several signs. It would achieve Mr. Roosevelt's objectives without change of the power of the court and without change of the Constitution.

Guild Members Meet At Baptist Parsonage

The local World Wide Guild organization held its January meeting at the Baptist Parsonage Friday afternoon. Following the business session a picnic supper was enjoyed. Those who were present were Miss Ruth Sherwood, president; Miss Ruth Frances Jones, Miss Dorothea Jones, Miss June Allen, Miss Joyce Allen and Mrs. Kenneth E. Arnold.

The Merit System Versus Spoils

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

Increased efficiency in all governmental activities.

Economy for the taxpayer.

Purposeful careers for public employes.

Elimination of the Spoils System.

These are a few of the goals sought by increasing numbers of taxpaying citizens who demand that the Civil Service or Merit System, now in partial effect, replace the Spoils System in all but the topmost federal jobs.

America can achieve these benefits—if Congress does its part. The way is open.

A White House message has urged expansion of Civil Service to include all employes except Secretaries, Under-Secretaries and those in similar policy-making offices. Several members of Congress have introduced measures to hasten extension of the Merit System idea.

But will they be put into effect? That's a different question.

Heavy political barricades must first be overcome. For a complete application of the Merit System would strip politicians of their greatest asset—the control and doling out of jobs. Naturally many politicians will oppose it. Naturally they will fight any step which extends the policy of selecting public servants on the basis of how well they can do their work instead of the basis of how many votes they can deliver for the politicians on Election Day.

There stands the basic issue—whether the Federal payroll, which costs the taxpayers more than a billion dollars annually, shall be for the benefit of politicians who control appointments, or of the public who foot the bill.

It's up to Congress to decide. The choice should not be a difficult one.

Cole Member Important Congressional Committees

Representative W. Sterling Cole, congressman from this district, has been appointed to several important committees, including the powerful Naval Affairs Committee. This is one of President Roosevelt's pet committees, owing to his interest to the navy and his formerly having served as assistant secretary of the navy. He is the seventh ranking minority member of the group. Mr. Cole is also a member of the Insular Affairs, Education and District of Columbia Committees.

Then and Now

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The contrast between conditions today and those which Mr. Roosevelt faced at his first inaugural is not merely between hard times and good times. Since March of 1932 the world has been passing through, and it may be that it is now passing out of, a great social crisis marked by a sudden, an unexpected and a violent lowering and also a violent unsettlement of the standard of life in all parts of the civilized world. The effect of this catastrophe was to provoke a desperate struggle for existence among nations and among interested groups and bewildered individuals within each nation. In this struggle the measures taken by nations and groups and individuals for their own defense were in general suicidal acts of aggression against all the others. Most of the supposed remedies immeasurably intensified the crisis. As the crisis became more severe, the struggle became more violent. Mankind was like a crowd trapped in a burning theater while the firemen, called in to deal with the conflagration, barricaded the exits and threw oil upon the flames.

The crisis which began elsewhere about 1928 and reached America in 1929 was no ordinary phase of a business cycle. It was a very severe depression aggravated by a tremendous political reaction.

The reaction took the form of a sudden and almost complete loss of faith in the principles by which the progress of western civilization has been promoted. From 1929 to 1934 the popular principles were almost everywhere reactionary in this sense of the word. They forced governments to break up the world economy into self-contained and economically isolated and fiercely jealous national systems. Then within each nation groups of producers struggled for power. They sought to organize monopolies by which they could maintain or perhaps increase their own separate standard of life. They fought for the power to fix prices, to withhold goods from the markets, to exclude rivals, to prohibit inventions, to stabilize old routines, to fortify vested interests. Men thought that the division of labor, the production of wealth, the exchange of goods, must be restricted by force in order to make themselves prosperous and secure. Then in the final stages of this reactionary panic individuals sought to separate themselves from all others and to find their own isolated salvation or profit by hoarding whatever wealth they could lay their hands on.

From the top to the bottom of western civilization the struggle for existence became a stampede in which nations, special interests, and individuals sought to make themselves self-sufficient and secure by tariffs, embargoes, subsidies, monopolies, restraint of trade, restriction of output, the destruction of exchange, and the hoarding of wealth.

It was a tidal wave of reaction in spite of the fact that it was accompanied by a clamorous chorus proclaiming it the beginning of a new era in human affairs. There is no longer any doubt that the movement was essentially and profoundly reactionary. For not only did it dislocate and disintegrate the economy of mankind, but everywhere it menaced the practice of responsible government, the foundations of legal order, and respect for individual rights and dignities. For isolated and self-contained nations struggling for separate survival were the natural enemies of an international community founded on law and the respect for treaties. So the world fell back into armed, aggressive, conspiratorial maneuvers. Within each nation classes and groups fighting for separate power became the natural enemies of the democratic process; a[illegible] bands in colored shirts began to tramp the streets. As the disintegration proceeded, there appeared to be no choice except as between the anarchy of these contending factions and a dictatorial authority which suppressed them with an iron hand. At the culmination of the crisis, the struggle of each nation, each group, and finally each person for separate security reached a point where in some countries the very conception of a society based on law and persuasion was lost.

The atmosphere is different today from what it was in March four years ago. Not only here, but in a large part of the civilized world, men feel themselves to be liberated from this suicidal struggle for existence and the barbarous reaction which accompanied it. The temper of public life has changed remarkably. Its tone is no longer set by harassed, insistent and embittered men driven to desperate measures by a sense of overwhelming emergency. Thus there has come back faith in the democratic process and in the patience, the tolerance and the self-respecting courtesy which are the soul of democratic living. Never before, I think, in our generation have the leaders of opinion in this country been so deeply aware of how precious is self-government and of how much it requires of each man in the way of personal decency. They have looked over the edge into the abyss below and they have come back, I believe, determined as no other generation since the beginnings of the Republic that they will not take freedom for granted and then squander it complacently, but that they will prove it against all who doubt its virtue, will defend it against all who seek its destruction.

The longest pastorate was that of Rev. J. W. Sanderson who served eight years and the shortest ministry was that of Rev. A. Sutherland, who served less than a year.

Present Repairs

The repairs to the building have been underway for several months and the major part of the work has been completed. A few minor details need to be fixed before the building is wholly completed.

The Rev. and Mrs. Lacey held open house recently to which many of the parishioners and friends went to see what had been done. They found a changed interior.

On entering the building from Wall Street or Academy Hill, one is impressed with the changes made in the building. Many of the exposed electric and gas fittings have been covered, new flooring has been laid through the building and the floors leveled.

The living room is the first room viewed. Here are clean rugs, newly painted and upholstered furniture, a new modern coal stove which heats the two front rooms. To the right of this entrance room is a combination reception parlor and office. The principal change in this room is a new composition wall over the old plaster, which used to sweat from the adjacent hill. An air space has been provided and the whole covered with cheerful wallpaper.

The dining room is in the rear of the entrance room. The staircase leading to the second floor was formerly in this room and blocked off one window. Here was also located the old "pot bellied" stove used to heat dining room and kitchen and leave other rooms exposed to the cold. New fir flooring has been provided here and with the dining room furniture and fixtures made visible by two windows, a cozy room has been made.

The kitchen of cream and red has been redecorated and cupboards built and a new kitchen sink installed. This room is south of the dining room or to the left of the entrance room. The chief improvement here has been the addition of a combination gas and coal or wood range.

One big improvement in the downstairs is the changing of the bathroom to the upstairs. This was located in the south wing of the house on the street side of the building, where constant freezups were noted. The tub and lavatory were salvaged from the mess of ancient material for use in the bathroom upstairs.

Second Floor Changes

The entrance to the upstairs is on the north-west corner of the combined reception room and office. Four steps are in the room and the others are concealed by partitions. This stairway was completely rebuilt. The Rev. Lacey has a few self-contrived gadgets of very practical value for the control of lights of the stairway and upper hall.

The bathroom upstairs is in green and cream with shades and curtains to match. Here is located the hot water heater for the house. Old fashioned rugs on the floor add color to the rooms on the second floor. The wall paper is flowered and cheerful and bright.

The master bedroom is on the south-east corner of the building. To the right of this in the hall is the guest bedroom. This was completely furnished by the Philathea Class from ceiling to floor and from wall to wall. The class members paid for the flooring, wall paper, shades and curtains, bed, bed clothing and linen, chest of drawers, and they have assured the pastor that they will have the perpetual upkeep of this room.

One realizes the changes made in the building when the rear of the upstairs is approached. For here are two rooms which have not yet been completed. Here are located the blackboards behind wall paper, ancient and dangerous electrical fixtures, gas fixtures of uncertain strength and vintage, flooring, creaking and decrepit, wall paper and plaster tearing and sagging.

One of these rooms on the west side of the building is to be made into a study for the pastor. Here will be a small library, study table and seclusion.

The entire building has new window shades, new flooring, concealed gas piping and electric wiring, new wall paper, completely repainted on the inside, wall plugs in every room in the house, gas fixtures in every room without the unsightly piping showing, new electric fixtures where needed and many other repairs needed to make the building habitable.

The story is told of one minister who came to the parsonage and lived there a short time alone. He then brought his wife with him and she walked through the house once, turned on her heel and left. Addison never to return and he kept bachelor quarters here throughout his ministry.

Work Donated

Most of the repair work was done by parishioners who donated time and materials to the parsonage. A time book of the work put into the reconstruction would show that 38 people put in over 900 hours of personal labor. Some worked but two hours. And others worked over 200 hours to complete the work.

The Rev. Lacey in his report on activities to date presented a list of those who worked in the building. The women were: Mrs. William Cooper, Mrs. Clark Baxter, Mrs. F. H. Smith, Mrs. Leo Miller, Mrs Josephine Clark, Mrs. James Neally Mrs. Rose Baxter, Mrs. Norman Closson, Mrs. L. E. Handy and Mrs. Lacey.

The men who worked in the building and donated time were: Clark Baxter, Ira Halninen, William Newman, William Cooper, Roy Bulkley F. H. Smith, Ralph Hand, Frank Carpenter, Edward Watkins, Roy Omelion, Wendell Smith, Ralph Dykins, A. E. Loper, Bert Harry, Robert Angar, Walter Perkins, Bert Rouse, Wilbur Bulkley, Harry Gage, Roger Williams, George Dininny, Douglas Hand, George L. Smith, Leo Miller, George Brownell and the Rev. Lacey.

The expenditures for the work so far have been as follows: L. E. Handy, $228.68; A. Sisto, 178.14; two carpenters for labor, $112.50; S. D. MacDowell, $34.99; Baker's, $10; W. M. Goff, $21.71; Kalamazoo Stove Co., $68.10; digging a ditch, $14; Corning Building Co., $6.20; plumbing labor account, $25.00; small accounts, $26.50; cleaning and upholstering furniture, $9.46.

The income for the work has been as follows: Donation, $25; sale of old heater, $10; two donations of $10 each; Blakeslee Class, $15; Orr Hill Aid, $10; Rathbone Aid, $5; three donations of $5; small sums, $1.83 and Addison Aid, $133.28, making a total of $235.01 receipts and expenditures of $750.

The donation of the Philathea class is not included in the above list nor is the work done by the above named people. Credit is also given by the pastor to those people in church organizations who contributed to the parsonage through these organizations. Liberal discounts were allowed on merchandise purchased locally according to the Rev. Lacey.

The Rev. and Mrs. Lacey are proud of their new home and extend an invitation to the people of the village, their parishioners and friends to visit them.

debts. A fair and more than just scaling down of these debts was made several years ago and they should be paid according to those terms or allowed to stand indefinitely against the countries which have defaulted. Most Americans have come to believe they will never be paid, and as Congress has fixed things they stand as an excellent insurance against further borrowing from us by war-mad nations.

As the late, lamented Will Rogers said: "America has never lost a war, nor won a conference." That should be a lesson to Washington to steer clear of any negotiations by European countries which can put them back on a borrowing basis.

GOOD LIGHTING

During dark, short mid-winter days, it is advisable to check the lighting in homes, offices and schools, suggests the New York State College of Home Economics.

Use a light meter, which may be borrowed from a power company's office, from a home bureau office, or sometimes from an electrical supply store. This may show that the lamps in the room need remodeling or replacing, or only that stronger bulbs are needed.

Most types of lamps on the market which throw the light up and out through the top of the shade, as well as cast a softer, more even light. The "raw bulb," as lighting specialists call an unshaded bulb, causes eye strain, and even with shades on the lamps may not be satisfactory without a diffusing bowl.

Old lamps may sometimes be remodeled and made better for the eyes by fitting them up with a diffusing bowl, with larger bulbs and perhaps even new shades. Shades should have a white lining and be wide enough for the light to reach the work. However, the total cost of refitting an old lamp should always be compared with the cost of a new one.

All lamps, new or old, should be tried in the place where they are to be used to see if they give a soft light, enough light for a particular spot, and a good general light in the room.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Successful Gardening

An ideal home vegetable garden is one that produces enough to supply the family with a good variety of fresh vegetables throughout the growing season; it also should produce enough surplus for storing and canning to last through the winter months.

Three things stand in the way of attaining the ideal garden. The lack of proper scheduling of planting dates is probably the most important. Many persons do not plant the cool-season crops early enough, and many more plant but once where several other plantings would make the crop available for use during most of the season.

The second rather common weakness in many gardens that are not too carefully planned is the use of varieties of inferior quality or those that are not well adapted to the locality. A big difference exists, for instance, between varieties of snap beans, or between varieties of tomatoes and peppers.

A third way in which family gardens can be improved is by trying additional crops, such as asparagus, chard, kohl-rabi and rutabagas.

January is probably the proper time to start the garden if it is to be a real success. Early and careful planning often saves much work and space in the garden and helps to insure success.

AN ADDISON ROMANCE

(Of the "Gay Nineties")

To Ada

"Where is your girl?" the maiden said
and laughing, bent her pretty head
Toward the lad who, quite surprised,
Gazed up into her smiling eyes.
He needed her; she needed him;
And as he gazed his eyes grew dim.
"I have no girl", at last said he,
Unless you yourself, my girl will be."

The mating call had come at last
From out the heart of lad and lass,
Not all the power of Heaven or Hell
Could sunder now its magic spell.
Quite unabashed, they strolled away
On down the street that happy day
He knew her heart and hand he'd win;
He needed her; she needed him.

* * * *

Long happy years have passed away
Since first they met that happy day,
Long happy years since, side by side,
They stood when she became his bride.
Children soon came, their path to cheer
But some God took, and at their bier
When hearts were sad and eyes were dim,
He needed her; she needed him.

Far from the home he loves so dear
He seeks to mold a proud career;
And as he works throughout the night,
His thoughts of her make labor light.
When yearning drives him back once more,
And loved ones meet him at the door,
Their cup of joy fills to the brim,
He needed her; she needed him.

The chair nobody sits in. And it's such a comfortable chair. But every member of the family avoids it—even guests shun it.

Why? Because that chair hasn't any light to make it cheerful and inviting, to encourage reading or sewing. Because it sits there in the gloom and semi-darkness.

Possibly there is a "forgotten chair" in your home. Look around! If so, an I. E. S. Better Sight Lamp can transform it overnight into one of the family's favorites. See the many models at our store or any dealer's today.

Ladies' Night At Ad Club Offers Varied Program

Singing, Musical Selections, a Talk on Newfoundland By the Rev. Lacey and Membership Drive Mark Active Meeting—the Rev. Axtell's Team Has Substantial Lead in Race for Members — Dinner Served in St. Catherine's Church.

Many events were crowded into a short space of time at the Addison Advertising Club meeting Thursday night. This was known as "Ladies' Night" and the wives and lady friends were invited guests. In addition the membership campaign was given impetus by a "can thermometer", a musical program was arranged under the direction of Joseph Greyback and the night's events was climaxed by a talk on "Newfoundland" by the Rev. Garland Gladstone Lacey.

Women of the Catholic Daughters of St. Catherine's Catholic Church served the supper in the church parlors. The women solicited food from the parishioners and all money received by the women for the meal from the Ad Club was given to the Rev. Francis Moffett, pastor of the Church. Seventy were served.

An informal community singing program was presented with Ray Brown as song leader and Mrs. Frank D. Kelly as accompanist.

President Charles Salerno turned the meeting over to Dr. Amos G. Stiker, referee in the membership drive campaign. The Rev. John V. Axtell and the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold, captains of the two teams were unable to be present. M. G. Hubbs represented the Rev. Axtell and Dr. Matthew Whitmore represented the Rev. Arnold.

Thirty-eight memberships were received. Points were on the following basis: renewal of associate membership, one point; new associate members, two points; renewal of active membership three points, and a new active member six points.

Yellow and black oil cans were used to represent the teams, yellow for the Rev. Axtell's and black for the Rev. Arnold. At the conclusion of the count, Dr. Stiker had 61 yellow cans and 39 black cans on the table. It was voted to continue the campaign until the next meeting as there are several memberships outstanding and others that have not been reported.

Joseph Greyback supervised the musical part of the program in the absence of Robert A. Willson, chairman for the entertainment program.

He presented Mrs. Irving R. Gladstone who gave two vocal solos, "I Love Life" and "In The Garden of Tomorrow". She was accompanied by Mrs. Greyback. Janet Taylor played two Chopin preludes on the piano and John Orr gave a clarinet solo, "Dream of the Shepard". Mr. Greyback closed the musical part of the program with two saxophone solos, "Miami Moon" and Passing Thought". He was accompanied by Mrs. Greyback.

Mr. Salerno then presented the Rev. Garland G. Lacey, pastor of the Methodist Church who took the group on a Scotsman's tour of Newfoundland, tour in the imagination. He said in part, "The first quarter of my life I spent in Newfoundland, 1800 miles from here. This is an island of 42,000 square miles and is the size of Virginia. The Island is the sentinel of the St. Lawrence. It is 316 miles wide by 317 miles long, yet if one travels around it the trip would be 6,010 miles owing to bays, fjords and other scenic places which make this island one of the scenic places of the world.

"People there are no different than we. The Eastern coast is affected by the influx of Europeans, the west coast is like Canada or the United States, the south has the influence of the French and the north is influenced by the Esquimos.

"The climate varies. In the north the temperature is affected by the Arctic currents and they have long winters while the south is governed by the Gulf Stream and has long summers, with the central part of Newfoundland being governed by both and therefore temperate.

"People originally settled along the coast to fish. This was the leading industry until recently. Over $9,000,000 in cod fish was exported annually. It was interesting to see the 16,000 ships set out to sea to fish. Many of the fishing traps caught from 75 to 100 barrels to a catch. These codfish were shipped to spain, Portugal and other Mediterranean ports.

"Sealing is also an important industry. Often times 200,000 seals are taken between March 10 and April 10 during the open season. Sealing ships have crews of 200 men. These men get into a school of seals, and hit the seals over the head with a club like a baseball bat and in three cuts of the knife have taken the pelt and discarded the carcass.

Seals are born white. The mother seal leaves the young near a 'blowing hole' on the ice and with thousands of these holes and young scattered about everywhere, seals have been tagged and no matter how far away they may get, they always return to their own young, despite the fact the ice on which the seals' young are, is moving at the rate of three to five miles per hour.

He told some interesting stories of the life of the seals and of their intelligence. The speaker also told of other fishing along the shores of Newfoundland and in the rivers of the island. The fishing now is only one-quarter of that of former years owing to lack of market.

The Rev. Lacey continued, "When fishing fell off the people were forced to move inland and papermaking is now the important industry of the island. One mill in my home town makes 500 tons daily which is shipped to London for the Daily Mail newspaper. Center Corners, near there, has a plant turning out 600 tons daily and capable of 1,000 tons. Its output goes to the New York Times.

"Mining is the second largest industry. Iron, copper, gold and lead are all found there. The lumber and mining will last over 100 years at the present rate of production, and reforesting timber tracts will give perpetual supplies for paper making.

"The Newfoundlanders pride themselves on being Britain's oldest colony, it is the tenth largest island in the world, the first Marconi wireless message to the old world was sent from here, and the first Methodist preacher in America came there one year before the United States had one. The island has no relationship, other than geographic, to Canada and the United States has tried to get it several times and may eventually.

"Newfoundland is a land of poetry, romance, scenery and sportsmanship". The speaker closed with the Newfoundland Ode, the national antem of the island. The Rev. Lacey answered questions at the conclusion of his address.

Messages of condolence from the club, will be sent to the Rev. Father Moffett, Fred Wilcox, Louis Davis and Fred Clark, who are all ill.

The women who served the supper were: Kitchen, Mrs. Martin Train, chairman, Miss Mary Ginhane, Mrs. Anna Loy, Mrs. Thomas Kane, Mrs. John Coleman, Mrs. Martin Callahan and Mrs. Ellen Hickey; dining room, Mrs. Francis Edwards, chairman, Mrs. Edwin Morris, Mrs. Josephine Hickey, Mrs. Sarah Train, Mrs. Francis Hill and Miss Nan Murphy.

Addison GLF Is Two Years Old—Profits Good

Two years ago January 2 the Addison Grangers League Federation opened its doors to the public for the sale of feed, seed, fertilizer, grains, flour and cereals and for the grinding of the same.

Kenneth Armstrong was sent here from Canisteo to open the local GLF outlet in Addison and vicinity. He has been manager since the opening two years ago.

To show the wisdom of the judgment of the men who planned on placing a mill in this village, the local mill has sold over 4,338 tons of merchandise in the past two years at a net profit of $3,050.01.

An operating statement of the financial transactions involved in managing the local plant would read as follows: net purchase, in dollars by patrons of the mill, $138,028.10 which is a large expenditure for farm products in a village this size, and with its surrounding territory.

The gross margin or profit on this sum was $12,027.23 which means a gross profit per ton of $2.77. And of the total sum 8.9 per cent was the gross margin.

The total labor cost during the period was $4,957.65 or the labor cost per each ton of merchandise moved and handled was $1.14 per ton. The total operating expenses, for heat, light, phone, stationery and other office and administration expenses was $8,977.22 or a cost of $2.07 total operating expenses for each ton sold.

The local plant services 285 patrons and returned to them last year a sum amounting to $701.98 on the goods they had purchased in addition to the rate offered by cooperative buying.

The mill sold 3,253 tons of feed. This was divided as follows: dairy tons, 1,814; poultry tons, 385; grains, 675 tons; ingredients, 379 tons, making up the total.

In addition the mill sold 161 tons of fertilizer and superphosphates; 492 tons of lime, 26 tons of small seeds, 33 tons of grain seeds, 26 tons of flour and cereals and 347 tons of other units and pounds of materials, making a total of 4,338 tons for the two years of business. The business year closed December 30, 1936.

News Ads Costs Less Than Any Other Medium

Let us talk business facts with the local advertiser regarding the use of the local newspaper to reach its customers.

A 30-inch advertisement at 30 cents per inch means $9 cost for such advertisement. That is 900 cents. This advertisement goes to 1,800 subscribers, which means one-half of one cent cost to the advertiser. Each subscriber represents four readers—a total of 7,200 persons who have this 30-inch ad placed before their eyes without any other cost to the advertiser than the 900 cents mentioned. Thus for one-eighth of one cent the advertiser's 30-inch message is laid before the possible buyer of his merchandise or whatever else he may have to sell.

Economically, this advertising is such a small tax added to the goods or things to be sold that no purchaser would be able to notice it.

The seller of the article advertised might hire and send a representative out with an automobile to contract and sell direct to customers, but such representative would not reach more than 30 individual customers in one day while his cost to the seller would be at least $9 per day in salary and transportation.

Thus the printed advertisement in the local paper of 1,800 circulation in the territory has 600 chances to interest a customer to one chance for the direct solicitor.

It then remains simply a matter of copy—that is, wording of the message—by the advertiser to secure for one-eighth of one cent the attention of a potential customer. The advertiser can, therefore, well afford to spend plenty of time and thought in developing his advertising message to make the reader want to buy that which he needs. Perhaps 60 inches of space at double the cost of 30 inches would afford more than double the striking power of the advertiser. The ratio of readers to cost per inch remains, making modern newspaper advertising the cheapest form of presenting sales messages to the people of any community where people read.

CCC Activities

Social dancing for beginners was added to the educational program last week. The educational adviser is conducting the class for the present. He is anxious to get a person capable of teaching dancing to take over the class.

The piano so graciously loaned to the camp by Mr. and Mrs. James Mullaney of Addison will help much toward solving the musical problem in the "rec" hall.

The educational department can also use to a good advantage chairs, tables, desks, etc., in the "rec" hall and library. Any help in this connection will be greatly appreciated.

Basketball teams of the Addison CCC were unusually busy last week. On Wednesday night the local CCC tossers won easily over the Arkport CCC Camp. The score was 46-19. At the end of the first half Addison was on top 32-6. This was the first league game for both teams. All of the starting five of the local camp shared in the scoring. It was only in the second half that the Arkport team showed enough to keep up with the pace which started with the initial basket.

On Thursday night representatives of Company 231 did not fair so well. Knoxville proved too much for both the Junior Varsity and varsity teams.

Knoxville Junior varsity won 30-20. The varsity game was a thriller. It was a nip and tuck battle thruout. At the half and at the end of the regulation playing time the score was tied. During the extra five minutes of play Knoxville scored three baskets to Addison's one, thus winning 50-46.

The Barrack teams were also active. Barrack 4 took Barrack 3 by a score of 12-7.

Wednesday night the varsity basketball team made a trip to Hornell to play the Almond camp in a league game.

Chief Bovee Seeks Driver Aid In National Safety Campaign

Village Hall Vicinity Dangerous Intersection—Simple Rules Formulated for Drivers at This Intersection —Asks Observance of Simple Rules of Road to Prevent Accidents — Legion Sponsoring Safety Drive.

Attention is called by local police authorities to traffic violations being committed in Addison. These are not particular to Addison but are noted here. A reporter for the Southern Tier News went on duty at the intersection of Tuscarora, Steuben, Main, South Streets and Valerio Parkway one day last week with Chief of Police Elmer Bovee. A national safety drive is underway and local motorists are asked to cooperate, by observing rules of the road.

Chief Vovee is chairman of the Safety Committee for the American Legion and by virtue of his position on the police force is in a position to make traffic and safety recommendations to motor car drivers. He made some recommendations relative to traffic at this dangerous intersection and asks the cooperation of motor drivers of Addison and vicinity, not that he wants to be official, but feels that by following a few simple rules there will be fewer accidents and jangled nerves as a result of trying to pass that intersection.

Proper signalling should be done at all times. One of the principal things at night he has noted is the lack of proper lights on cars. Tail lights will be out, headlights will be dimmed or out and sometimes all lights on the car will be out of order and a dangerous condition is created for approaching cars as well as the driver of the offending car.

Any motorist attempting to make a U turn at this intersection should give other motorists the right of way, and not block every street on the turn.

When a traffic officer is on duty at the intersection his word prevails over signs and regulations. Many motorists bring their cars to a dead stop at the intersection when an officer is on duty, but forget it when he is not. Then this driver will start his car, and may be running against traffic opened by the officer on duty.

Drivers coming from Tuscarora Street to Valerio Parkway should not speed across the intersection but go slowly as traffic may be moving in South Street.

Local people when desiring information or talking with anyone should not park cars in middle of the street but pull to the curb to prevent headon collisions, not to obstruct vision of drivers behind, and to make it easier for pedestrians to see the full length of the street both ways.

Chief Bovee has noted too great speed on the part of junior operators and insist they obey the traffic laws within the jurisdiction of the village.

Drivers coming into a main artery of travel from any side street should come to a complete stop.

Violations of all the above rules were shown while the Chief was on traffic duty on the corner.

It was noted that the children coming from school stood on the curb waiting for word from the traffic officer, before attempting to cross the street in any direction. Chief Bovee pointed out that many adults do not do this.

Chief Bovee feels that by a proper observance of the rules, driving in Addison will be more of a pleasure than a nerve-racking experience.

Attention of girl-crazy drivers is called by the police to the obedience to traffic signals. It has been noted that these drivers, when they come to an intersection will toot their horns and sometimes endanger the lives of the average pedestrian. But when a pretty girl passes by, they slow down or stop, impeding traffic and many times going against the wishes of the traffic officer in charge of the intersection.

Another serious offense committed frequently here is the turning of motor cars in the middle of a block, stopping all traffic and endangering cars and petestrians. Police asks all drivers to go to a street intersection to make a turn. It is a traffic violation to turn in the middle of a block and arrests will be made to stop this practice.

LAMBS REACH MARKET

Supplies of high quality lamb are now coming on the market and afford housewives more opportunity for a wider use of lamb in daily menus, says Professor R. B. Hinman of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Lamb should no longer be regarded as a seasonal meat, he points out, but is available throughout the year. Housewives may be impressed with the fact that all lamb cuts are tender and may be prepared either by broiling or roasting, that lamb is high in food value and may be combined to advantage with other foods. The use of lamb is on the increase in the United States.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of information of the New York State college of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Repairing Old Books

Miss M. F., wants to know how to repair and to bind her old books.

Mrs. Dorothy Riddle, librarian at the college of home economics, replies: "We have sent you a list of reference books that give hints on bookbinding and on repairing books. You can select those that may help you the most." The list follows:

Bookbinding for Schools, the Manual Arts Press, Peoria, Ill.; Booking, A Manual for Those Interested in the Craft of Bookbinding, Dutton; Bookbinding for Beginners, Davis Press; Bookbinding for Teachers, Students and Amateurs, Macmillan; Bookcraft, Gaylord Bros., Syracuse.

Sprouts Come Thicker

Mrs. G. D., writes: "I would like to know what we can do to get rid if locust trees, as they are spreading all over our lot. We have cut them down, but they come up thicker."

J. D. Pond of the forestry department answers: "Sodium arsenate may be used to prevent sprouting from stumps or suckering from the roots.

"A solution that has been found very effective may be made by mixing into three and one-half pints of water, one pound of arsenite. This makes about one-half gallon of killing solution. keep it in a jug or glass labeled POISON.

"Make slanting ax cuts through the bark and well into the sapwood near the ground level. Pour or squirt the poison into these until the liquid begins to flow out of the edges of the cut. Very little is needed to fill an ax cut. Two cuts on opposite sides of the stem are enough. Leave the entire tree standing until both top and root system are dead.

"The best time to do the work is from August to November, but it can probably be done anytime when the sap is not flowing freely."

Frozen Combs and Wattles

Frozen combs and frozen wattles have not caused the flock owner much worry this year and need not cause trouble throughout the remainder of the winter. Warm buildings which have the proper ventilation so the natural warmth of the bird is retained and the moisture is carried from the building through openings in or near the roof.

The Mediterranean breeds of poultry such as Leghorns and Minorcas are most susceptible to poor conditions in cold weather and having very large combs and wattles suffer frozen members when other breeds remain untouched. The American and Asiatic breeds as well as other heavy breeds such as the Orpingtons have shorter combs and wattles.

The trouble is experienced almost entirely with the males because they do not protect themselves by thrusting their heads under their wings as the females usually do. A male bird which has been injured in this way may become a poor breeder. It is therefore important that this point be given consideration.

There has been sufficient cold weather this winter to cause poor ventilation to make itself evident. The litter may be damp or wet which is one indication. The walls on cold mornings may be white with frost or soaked with moisture.

Add a window covered with cloth to permit the passage of air without a draft. Perhaps the trouble can be remedied by making a large opening at the base of the windows and increasing the openings under the eaves. Every change should be watched carefully for a few days. No drafts should strike the birds.

Sometimes water dishes are the cause of wet litter. If the water fountain or dish is placed on a low standard and only enough space around the edges is left for the birds to drink this difficulty may be overcome. The wattles cannot get wet making them more susceptible to freezing temperatures. In case a pan is being used for a water dish it may be set in a larger pan. The larger pan catches the waste water.

Some poultrymen have small barrels or coups in the basement where they can house males on extremely cold nights when the temperature is zero or below.

Frozen members may be treated effectively by rubbing with snow or cold water. Vaseline is also a good remedy.

In buying baby chicks, investigate the average production of the parent flock and whether the birds were selected for production, size, freedom from breed defects and other points. The lowest acceptable flock record is 180 eggs.

The place to cut meat on the farm is in a cellar or room where temperature and ventilation can be controlled. Earthen jars or crocks are the most satisfactory containers, though new hard-wood barrels, molasses or sirup barrels, thoroughly cleaned, may be used.

SPORTS ON PARADE

by Leo Bolley

MARJORY KNAPP of Dansville, N. Y., is only 10 years old, but she is preparing in a big way to enter the New York State Women's Championship this year. . . She's leaving soon for Pinehurst to polish up her game.

Despite her tender age, Marjory has already been in four major tournaments. . . When she was nine, she placed fourth in the Western New York Women's Tournament and made a good showing at Pinehurst last year, too. . . She has been playing since she was five—half her life—and she uses a specially made set of clubs.

Maybe Marjory won't be able to equal Craig Wood's 430-yard drive that was a sensation of the 1933 Open. . . But it's the touch on the green that counts and apparently the little gal has that a-plenty.

A new high in suspense—The action of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission in waiting five days before changing the decision of the Al Ettore-John Henry Lewis fight.

Did you know that Eddie Phillips, who caught for the Pirates in the first World Series game back in 1904, lives outside of Albany. . . I interviewed him on the radio and found that he is one of the most astute students of the game even though he has not played for many a year.

Thumbnail Sketch—Johnny Galloway. . . He was the "Ghost" Galloway who was a great halfback at Colgate 10 years ago. . . Coached football and basketball at Alfred for five years, although he had completed only two years at Colgate. . . Returned to Colgate a year ago to complete work leading to a degree. . . Took over the basketball coaching job and worked as assistant football coach. . . Due to graduate from Colgate in June. . . Probably the only undergraduate coaching basketball at a major institution in the country.

Personalities—Red Ormsby, one of the big league's best umpires, always talks about his children. . . You can't blame him for he has a dozen of them. . . Which gives him plenty to talk about. . . Bill Klem has very little to say about one subject—age. . . Bill could tell plenty if he wished, for he will be 63 next month. . . But he's still very active and he still calls them as he sees them. . . And he can still see them!

Knoxville Trimmed By Town Team, 45 to 33

The Addison Town Team invaded Knoxville Saturday night, to return with 45 to 33 victory over the Pennsylvania team. The Addison team started to click in the first few minutes of play sending the score to 27 to 11 at the half. Grange and Company broke through the Knoxville defense time after time for cripples meanwhile forcing the home team to depend on shots from outside the defense to keep them in the running.

Minus the services of Burke the town boys led by Milt Crane proved their worth and they swamped the Knoxville team which defeated the local CCC a few nights before. The Town Team journeys to Hammondsport Wednesday night to battle the pick of the Grape Town boys.

Milton Crane headed the scoring column with six baskets and two fouls, a total of 14 points. Kelts, Knoxville center, collected a like number. John Grange, while not up to his usual form due to the determination of the rival team to keep the Addison star out of the play, found time to net 11 pointers. Hewson tossed three baskets and two fouls through the hoop for the Addisonites.

AHS ENROLLMENT INCREASES

With the commencement of the new high school term, Principal Irving Gladstone announced there are 15 new enrollments in the academic department of the high school. Five of these were advanced from the elementary school here and the others came to the local high school department from nearby schools at Cameron Mills, Cameron and other places.

Chicken thieves have visited the coops of several farmers in the vicinity of Cameron Mills the past few weeks.

Two news notes of the past week have struck us as an interesting juuggling of figures. The first concerned a "10 year old farmer who served eight years in prison for a killing". The second item was relative to Coach Bible who goes to the University of Texas at a "salary of $15,000 which is $17,000 more than the president of that university received."

If ice don't form on the river pretty soon, some of the milk producers who depend upon that source for their ice, will be sorely out of luck during the coming hot weather spell. This has been the first in several years that there has not been a good coating of ice on the river at that time of year.

"The annual meeting of the Reading Anti-Thieving League was held January 18." My, my my, who would think such a league was necessary in these days. I wonder whether the members pledge not to thieve or whether they pledge to catch other thieves.

Three men within a 50 mile radius of Addison have committed suicide within the past week. I used to think a man was a moral coward when he committed suicide, but I sort of feel now that it requires a brave man, altho he may be insane, to deliberately take his own God-given life. He is brave because he defies God and defiles his own body. I often wonder about the mental processes through which a suicide goes before death takes place.

I meant to tell you this a couple of weeks ago, but it slipped my mind. Short Tract, a town over the border had no telephone service Christmas day from 12 noon until 4 P. M. to enable the operators to enjoy Christmas at home. This seemed to me to be bringing us back to the days when we really had to make our Christmas calls in person and not by phone.

Mrs. Irving Gladstone announced at the Ad Club meeting Thursday night that she wished she had sung before she ate rather than after. That was rather a mean trick to fill her up with good food and make her sing while the others sat contentedly at rest.

—o—

Dr. Stiker was supposed to be a neutral referee in the membership drive being conducted by the Ad Club, but I fear he chiseled a bit in favor of the yellow team, for according to Secretary Dykins' figures he put six too many cans on the table for the yellows.

Have you donated to the Red Cross for the flood relief sufferers? They need food, clothing, medical supplies and shelter and only your funds and funds like yours from all over the country will alleviate their suffering. This is the greatest national catastrophe in many years and it will be many weeks before the relief will not be needed.

It has been interesting watching the rise and fall of our own little river here. The debris being brought down from up stream has been noteworthy in that someone below is going to have a lot of wood.

Chief Bovee points out some good traffic suggestions which might apply any place in an article in another section of this paper. Observance of these rules will prevent many accidents when motorists take to the open road for their year's driving.

Rev. Lacey's story at the Ad Club meeting relative to the mother fly walking across Ray Brown's bald head and telling her daughter. "Times have changed sinces I was young, this was but a footpath once" struck me as pretty good, altho with my reclining hairs I have been kidded about this story during the past week.

I was telling some of the members in the office here that meat loaf is a convenient form of meat to serve at some catch-as-catch can social functions. However, I have eaten so much during the past two months at odd functions that I'm beginning to feel like a well-stuffed and seasoned loaf.

Attended a meeting of the Gillet Club recently in which resolutions were passed to perpetuate the name of the Gillet family. One of the interesting things noted at this meeting was that only half of the members in attendance were native residents of Addison.

—o—

Mrs. Charles Miller, mother of our editor and publisher is dead. She may not have been known to many of the younger people of Addison, but to some of the older ones she was known and she knew the young ones and kept conversant with their activities. At 80 she had lived a full life as wife to a pioneer and as mother to a group of children who brought the glow of pride to her declining years. And she epitomized all that these words wife and mother meant to the people of Addison and vicinity. I say for the members of the staff of the papers, "Thy Will be done."

That's all.

Highlights of the Hammondsport Game

By "RUDY" WADE

Did you know Harry Laffkas could dance? When Dominick made his spectacular mid-court shot which tied the game and Francis Heidrick threw one in from center court to win, Harry just bounded to his feet and for the first time in two years got really excited at a basketball game.

The crowd was not worthy of such a thrilling contest, for many of the home team supporters did not attend the game.

Arloween Space, who jumps center for the girls would make a good one-man, rather one-girl cheering section. What a voice she has when she wants to cheer for Addison.

And speaking of cheering it was real sportsmanlike for the Addison cheerleaders to give a yell for Hammondsport even though it was not returned. I hope this continues at every game, either home or abroad.

* * *

Number 9 for the visitors almost upset the local applecart when he shot three baskets from side court within two minutes of the opening whistle. He caused a 10 to 1 score at the end of the first period with AHS on the short end.

Comparisons are funny things. Hammondsport has defeated both Canisteo and Avoca, and so along comes poor old Addison defeated by both teams, and trims Hammondsport the conqueror.

Contributed: To hear the young man who wrote these highlights talk about the game makes all of us who didn't attend sure wish we had seen it. We'll go to the next game.

Advertise Wares Ten Eyck Tells N. Y. Farmer

Advertising to stimulate sales of New York State farm products is advocated by Commissioner Peter G. Ten Eyck of the Department of Agriculture and Markets.

"The New York State growers", Commissioner Ten Eyck said, "should systematically advertise what they have for sale. All advertising should be synchronized when the season of harvest is on for that particular product, and only shipping for sale in the big markets for family consumption outstanding number one grades appropriately marked 'New York State Products'."

"Orderly marketing of the farmer's products has not kept pace with the productive side of agriculture. As usual New York State has again taken the lead in agriculture by endeavoring to improve upon marketing conditions in the state. The largest consuming centers have established markets of one kind or another, some by the municipalities in which they are located, some by large transportation companies and some by the farmers themselves and just recently the state, in cooperation with the federal government, has built and is building what is known as regional markets, located at various strategic points in the state, where it is felt that farm products can be shipped in from the surrounding counties and bought for local and state-wide sale.

"To obtain the best results in selling their products, it is necessary for the farmers themselves to see that their products are properly graded, properly packed and properly selected to meet the demands of the consumers in the cities.

"Those farmers in the other states, as well as in foreign countries, who are competing for our markets, have made their packs attractive to the eye to meet the desires of the public at large. It is for growers in New York State to standardize their products, pack them attractively to meet the demands of the public at large, and, wherever possible, cooperate among themselves to sell through a system of orderly marketing and at the same time arrange to carry the distribution of their wares over longer periods of time, particularly their nonperishable products. This will prevent the dumping of their products on the market at the time of harvesting, thus glutting the market and thereby becoming the cause of lowering the price of a commodity to a price less than it cost to produce it.

"An organized program of feeding the market systematically with only enough agricultural products to meet the requirements of the consumer from day to day, or week to week, in each and every market, if properly carried out, will net the producer a fair and adequate return to defray his cost of production."

HENS GO ON 28-DAY MONTH

A new set-up for egg-laying tests in the United States will be undertaken in New York State starting October 1, 1937, according to R. G. Ogle of the State College of Agriculture and supervisor of the state tests at Stafford and Horseheads.

Changes from the old system include a 28-day month for the pullets, and, in addition, each entry now shall consist of twenty pullets. Heretofore, thirteen started the year, records were kept on all, and the ten birds highest in production were counted as the official laying entry.

The replacement period for birds out of condition will extend for the full first month of the test, October, instead of only two weeks as heretofore. Another point is that all summaries and other tabulations will be figured on the original twenty birds entered.

Hammondsport Championship Hopes Fade Before AHS Onslaught

Revivified Knights Squad Springs Surprise on Visiting League Leaders—Two Lucky Baskets in Last Two Minutes of Play Give Locals 18 to 16 Lead at Final Whistle—Seconds Nose Out Opponents.

By Maynard B. Allen

The Addison Knights sent their championship hopes skyrocketing with a 18-16 victory over their league-leading rival, Hammondsport, Friday evening at the high school auditorium. Paced by Francis Heidrick the Knights played inspired ball after trailing 10 to 1 at the first quarter.

Fighting an up hill game the Addison boys, spurred on by the knowledge that Raymond Hargrave would be in the line-up for the rest of the season giving them a sporting chance at the pennant, gave an exhibition worthy of some of the Addison teams of old.

After a nearly disastrous first quarter the Knight's defense held the invaders to two baskets and four goals for the remainder of the game. Meanwhile the offense started to click collecting 17 points off the hitherto unbeaten Grape Pickers.

A fine example of school spirit was shown by Paul Thomson who walked 6 miles to play in the game and then gave a good demonstration of how basketball should be played. Orr and Gardner plugged every opening in the defense as fast as they appeared and gave the invaders plenty of worry by their fast passing attack. Joe Dominick, veteran Knight, played a grand game of ball in his first appearance with the 1937 edition of the Addison team.

Heidrick led the Addisonites in the scoring column finding the basket for three double-deckers and a foul. Hopper played a consistent game while Perkins stood the crowd on its feet by a sensational play which stopped a sure basket for the lads from the grape country. Champlin bore most of the burden for the Hammondsport team; on the offense he contributed nine points and did considerable work on the defense.

As the teams went into action Champlin dropped two shots thru the net. Gerould followed with another double-decker. Heidrick converted a foul for the Knights. Champlin again came through with a couple of pointers to increase Hammondsport's lead to nine points as the quarter ended.

Heidrick placed one in the basket from the corner to give the home team two points. Dominick followed it with a converted foul. Gerould took an Addison tip-off to score an easy basket. Thomson ended the half making a free throw good to bring the score up to 12-5.

Hopper sank one from the free throw line. Orr crashed through to snag a cripple. Thomson was fouled on attempting to shoot and made one of his tries good. Richards broke into the scoring column with a steve from center. Gardner duplicated the feat a moment later. Champlin made a gratis shot good as a time out was called. The score remained 15 to 11 till the quarter ended.

Hopper opened the scoring in the last quarter with a converted foul. Richards retaliated with a good throw from the side line to put Addison two points behind. Three minutes went by without either team being able to score. Then as the noise became deafening Heidrick tossed a basket, falling on his face as the ball swished through the hoop, the score board reading 16 all. Joe Dominick took advantage of the surprised Hammondsport team to put the game on ice with a double-decker. Lady Luck played with Addison on these last two baskets. Perkins entered the game and spoiled the invaders' only chance to even the score by diving past a Hammondsport player on his way to the Addison basket and hooking the ball from his hands.

CAMERON MILLS

(Received too late for publication last week.)

Rumsey Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Reynolds of Cameron Mills, is ill and unable to attend high school. He is being attended by a physician from Elmira.

Residents of this community who have been near Adrian in the afternoon during the past week report seeing deer at a distance numbering nearly seventy.

In spite of the date, January 15, every evidence of spring is at hand. Spring rains, budding lilacs, leaves, tulips and peonies peeping forth, bees busy cleaning their hives in preparation for a new store of honey, are a few indications noted in this locality. A nearby resident heard a robin one day recently, and upon looking to make sure he heard correctly, saw it sitting in a tree singing with all its might.
